Router in DMZ

2019/11/01

I am attempting to use my own router (Google WiFi) with Google Fiber and avoid a Double NAT situation due to using Xbox One X. I am a fairly novice networking person and I wanted to clarify something I've researched on. Since Google Fiber Network Box does not support Bridge Mode it looks like I need to setup a reserved IP for the wan address of my google WiFi and place it in the google fiber DMZ. Is there any security issues with this setup? I read where I should use a static ip but I'm not sure how to sue this it looks like google fiber supports this for business users??? please help I'm just trying to make the network as secure as possible and avoid the double nat situation and still have all the gaming features the Xbox supports. If this is a safe setup I'm assuming any switches or hardwired devices downstream are secure, too? Thanks!
